Everyone Has a Story (EHAS) is an online story-sharing project based in Adelaide, South Australia. It is a unique platform where gay and same sex attracted men from different cultural and ethnic backgrounds share their experiences of coming to and living in South Australia, through story telling.

Both writing your own stories and reading other people's stories can be empowering. When you write, you embark on a journey of exploring your unmined strengths; when you read, you gain inspiration between the lines and may come up with more refreshing approaches to better living and personal well-being.

If you'd like to share a short story of yours with a hope to inspire others on being positive in the face of a particular challenge of either studying or living in South Australia, please connect with this project by sending an email to: b.yi@rasa.org.au
