Case Management

Helping young people to develop pathways for achieving success in learning, or moving into the work force.

Relationships Australia
SOUTH AUSTRALIA

Schools, Community, Innovations and Learning Service (SCILS) aims to improve the social and emotional wellbeing of young people and their families.

How we can help

We support young people to find their own learning pathway and to better cope with their circumstances. We also assist young people to improve their sense of wellbeing, and move towards independence and employment.

How we do that

Our Case Managers know that developing trust is vitally important. Listening to, and genuinely understanding each students' learning experience builds a successful connection. Our team is known for their 'never give up' approach. The high attendance rate of students shows that our approach is working. Each term, SCILS Case Managers work with hundreds of students across metropolitan Adelaide.

They meet weekly with the young person in an environment that is safe and comfortable.

Together, they develop a plan for the year ahead, set goals and explore the options for learning and wellbeing.

This may include returning to some formal learning at school or attending one of our SCILS Learning Hubs. It could begin with a very gradual reconnection with the community and local neighbourhood.

At SCILS, we respect and welcome diversity, and we care about your cultural beliefs.

We respect every child and young person's right to a confidential and safe service, and we will explain our confidentiality processes.

We offer

- Information and referral: we can provide information about what supports are required, and will assist to link in with relevant local community services.
- Advocacy: negotiating with services to ensure positive outcomes for families and young people (e.g. legal aid services, education, housing, financial services, medical).

For Young People

Education

There are many different ways to gain an education. SCILS Case Managers will work with you to identify your strengths and interests, then set up the connections and help you take the first steps. This may be in one of our own SCILS Learning Hubs or at another service offering the courses or learning opportunities you require.

Wellbeing

Strong relationships, resilience, a sense of accomplishment, enjoying what you do and feeling your life has meaning can all improve a person's wellbeing. SCILS Case Managers work with you to identify areas of improvement and develop wellbeing goals to support you to feel the best you can.

Independent Living Skills

Learning how to look after yourself is an important part of adolescence. Your Case Manager will help you assess your current level of independent living skills and help you set goals that move towards independence.

Employability

Employers are looking for young people with good work skills to join their team. This can include your organisational skills, how you work with others and other transferrable skills. Your Case Manager will work with you to identify the employability skills you have and the skills you may need to develop for successful work.
